Providence High School
Burbank, California

Foreword

Quaint, perhaps: an attic room, a trunk of mementos, scrapbooks and souvenirs. With each treasured object, a woman who calls Providence her alma mater remembers nostalgically people and events of times past. These are not merely disjointed recollections of acquaintances and occurrences, but pieces in an intricate puzzle. Experiences are relived as the puzzle is fitted together. Each piece has contributed to her development of character through education, social activity, and prayer; each piece helps to form the memory.

How difficult this is for us to appreciate now, with the worry and the work, the pressure of education. How difficult to understand how that which is dreaded today can become such a fond reminiscence tomorrow. Yet, some day, you will want to recall your years at PHS, just as this woman is doing. Watch her now as she retraces her school life, picturing her young self in each phase of that life; share her wisdom of age, for, unfortunately, it is often only after the passing of years that the full value of education can be comprehended.

High school passes quickly. Too soon a scrapbook is all that remains; maybe not even that, maybe only a vague remembrance. But youth is too precious to recall only vaguely. Through words and photographs, a yearbook endeavors to vividly recreate these remembrances. We offer you a scrapbook of memories to help you enjoy the past while you anticipate the future. This is Providence, seen through your Esprit 1964.

Our 1964 Esprit is dedi-

Sister Rebecca

Every girl must receive inspiration and guidance for her future as a Christian woman. The seed of knowledge and betterment must be implanted in her and be constantly irrigated with the waters of encouragement—waters which flow from a fountain of warmth and understanding. Such is Sister Rebecca.

Sister has impressed students with her daily smile and interesting teaching methods. Who would have ever believed that squeamish girls could enjoy biology? It was only through her frankness and enthusiasm that we became not only interested, but intrigued, with the life science.

How we anticipated senior religion classes. Sister's practical adaptations of basic beliefs have been and will continue to be invaluable. She is truly interested in each student as an individual. As moderator of the Confraternity, Sister has made Catholic Action a part of our lives and has offered useful solutions to the problems faced by our society.

So, with great appreciation for your warmth and inspiration, Sister Rebecca, we dedicate our 1964 Esprit to you.

Although Sister is outstanding in our memories, she alone did not mold our ideas. There were others. . . .

Sister Rebecca, her face hidden, arranges the altar for Mass.

As a mother discusses her daughter's future, Sister listens intently.

Guidance is an integral part

Sister Agnes speaks to the student body at an ASB assembly

Sister Rebecca is seen in her office, checking through files

All teachers must be guides, especially those who teach high school students. But the administration of the school has a particular task. Sister Agnes, as principal, approaches the grave responsibility given her with benevolence and devotion. Her skillful organization is noted by all, especially the sophs to whom she teaches religion. Capably assisting her is Sister Rebecca, vice principal.

They head the Guidance Council, whose duty it is to choose and prepare areas of discussion which will encourage students to give serious consideration to the world of tomorrow. The Council, consisting of one homeroom teacher from each class, develops programs so that each student, while being instructed by her teachers, can begin to train herself. Each girl must realize the value of prayer and knowledge and use them throughout her life.

Teachers conduct the Council-prepared discussions weekly in their homerooms in such a way that the full impact of the topics under discussion will be brought to bear on their students. The privilege of leading youth rests with every teacher. A philosopher once said, "You will be what you are now becoming." Every teacher at PHS is helping us to become worthwhile adults.

of a high school education

Miss Dennis, Mrs. Guhin, and Miss Gill, investigate books that will be used by their students

Teachers handle business, books

Some may think this library bulletin board says "Three Cheers for Boys", but Mrs. Guhin knows the cheers are directed to books.

Sister Margaret demonstrates the correct method of changing typewriter ribbon

Performing her duties as school accountant, Sister Reparata hands change to Barbara Sheehan

Mrs. Emily Guhin has a busy day binding and repairing books, preparing book and catalogue cards, checking out materials and checking in returns. In her position as librarian, Mrs. Guhin is a friend to all PHS students. Her efficient organization of library materials and her cheerful willingness to help confused students become more proficient in the use of the library has made Mrs. Guhin a welcome addition to the PHS faculty.

Directing students toward competency in the arts of typing and sewing keeps Sister Margaret of Jesus occupied. Through her classes in these commercial and domestic sciences, Sister Margaret trains girls to enter the business world or to become able homemakers. Though she teaches only a portion of the student body, her smile and her inspiring devotion to God are well known to all.

Sister Reparata has the monumental task of keeping the financial records for Providence High School. She is familiar to students as the dispenser of bus cards, collector of tuition, and a perpetual note sender.

Language arts develop clarity

Mrs. Snyder shows her students how to properly apply stage make-up.

Mrs. Le Fevre looks over a French textbook for one of her classes

The ability to speak well in public situations as well as private conversation is one which proves to be invaluable. Mrs. Jeri Snyder, through her classes in speech and drama, develops poise and speaking facility in her students. She uses active class participation, including humorous, dramatic, and impromptu speaking, dramatic improvisations and play readings. Mrs. Snyder incorporates her interesting methods into the Speech Club, which she moderates.

Mrs. Gabrielle Le Fevre, through her daily French I to IV classes, brings her students to a greater interest in the French language. Being a native of France, Mrs. Le Fevre is especially well-versed in all phases of her courses. She is able to present her students with interesting accounts of life in France, along with the necessary elements of grammar and pronunciation.

Classes in German and Latin occupy most of Mrs. Susan Basmajan's day. She also teaches a class in composition, which deals with the technical elements of the English language and prepares her students for foreign language courses. Mrs. Basmajan moderates the German Club, dedicated to arousing interest in German civilization.

The fundamentals of German and Latin are explained by Mrs. Basmajan

Seniors receive finishing touch

Preparing for a Biology lab class, Sister Rebecca collects and arranges equipment.

The senior teachers must add the polishing touches before a senior is faced with the challenging future.

Sister Rebecca, moderator of homeroom 102, spends the better part of her day teaching life sciences. She has two physical science classes, two advanced biology classes, and one Religion IV class. Besides her instructive duties, Sister is the senior class moderator, head of the Science department, and the moderator of the Confraternity.

Sister Stephanie, managing homeroom 302, teaches two classes of English IV and one period of Religion IV. She is also a member of the American Studies team teaching program, instructing the juniors of 304 in U.S. History. In addition to this, she oversees one department of the speech club.

Sister Elizabeth, head of senior homeroom 207, teaches senior religion. Especially patient with question-askers, Sister is adept at giving lively examples to illustrate subject matter.

Sister Stephanie browses through paperbacks which students will use in her English classes.

Sister Elizabeth explains the impediments to marriage to her seniors in 207.

Teachers challenge junior minds

Annette McQuade offers her help to Sister Martha, who is using the projector for one of her classes.

A familiar scene—Mrs. Wehrly lectures her History students from the podium.

Literature in America is the topic as Miss Dennis speaks to her English class

The juniors are competently guided by a team of talented teachers.

Sister Martha, moderator of homeroom 304, is also adviser to the Vista and head of the English department. She teaches Religion III and two classes each of English III and IV. In addition to these responsibilities, she is the Junior class moderator.

Miss Dennis also has a demanding schedule, including moderating homeroom 307. She has two classes of Religion III, one each of English, I and III, and a French I class daily.

Mrs. Wehrly, head of homeroom 309, teaches three daily classes of World History, one period of Modern Affairs, and one United States History class. She is also the head of the Social Studies Department.

Soph teachers

Delving into the Religion section of the library, Sister Clare provides excellent background for her religion classes.

Providence sophs, a lively group of underclassmen, have their interests pointed toward intellectual and social ends by competent teachers. Sophomore homeroom moderators must prepare their charges to accept the responsibilities, duties, and privileges that go with becoming upperclassmen. Each teacher has contributed to the development of the sophomores.

Sister Clare has a busy daily schedule, encompassing one period of World History, two first year Spanish classes, and three periods of sophomore religion. She also moderates the Coquettes, freshmen preparing to join the Confraternity. Her main responsibility is guiding the sophomores of homeroom 305. Her students remember her for her ability to clearly communicate difficult subject matter.

Miss Gill explains the symbolism in Sea of Grass to her English II students.

The sophomores of 301 have a "hoot" each day with their moderator, Miss Linda Gill. Six periods of English II and III constitute Miss Gill's day. She has four classes of sophomore English daily and teaches the juniors of 309 on alternate days. She employs her wit and imagination to make literature interesting; and her friend, Alphonse E. Fesque, makes grammar easier to bear. She also serves as advisor to the Concept, the school's literary publication.

instruct future upperclassmen

Miss Pfenning demonstrates to her students proper techniques in the use of the sewing machine.

Present day tension spots are pinpointed in Mrs. Ramos' Modern Affairs classes

Homeroom 206 and the Home Economics Club are under the expert guidance of Miss Jean Pfenning. Miss Pfenning spends her day mainly teaching the domestic arts of cooking and sewing; but, besides these, she teaches two daily classes of physical science to sophomores. Her work in these fields, both important in achieving a well-rounded education, has contributed greatly to preparing future homemakers.

Since it is important to be informed of current events, it is both necessary and rewarding to have background for discussion of these vital problems. Through her classes in Modern Affairs, Mrs. Judith Ramos helps students develop Christian attitudes toward the world today. Mrs. Ramos teaches three periods of English I, exposing freshmen to penetrating (!) concepts of grammar and literature. Mrs. Ramos also serves ably as advisor to the Esprit

Teachers launch

The many phases of bookkeeping are discussed in Mrs. Winslow's General Record keeping classes

Sister Celine Marie directs her energies toward the Frosh in homeroom, 303, and upon those in her Algebra class. Sister's aim is to develop in her Contemporary Problems students a sense of responsibility and an awareness of the problems of their world. Her format for class-prepared discussions impresses upon her pupils the need for ~~constant~~ intelligent, and mature thinking.

The freshman have chosen Providence for many reasons, one of which is the high caliber of our faculty members. These qualified leaders devote their knowledge and talents to our betterment.

Frosh in 104 receive guidance from Mrs. Laura Winslow. Under her direction are the business students of Providence. In preparing these future secretaries, Mrs. Winslow stresses continual practice in Typing, Shorthand, and Bookkeeping. She also instructs her students in the personal qualities needed in today's secretaries.

Preparing the seniors to assume civic responsibilities is Sister Celine Marie's primary task this year

fledgling Frosh

Mrs. Rivera remains smiling even after a display of Eutaw, C. some of her students' program efforts.

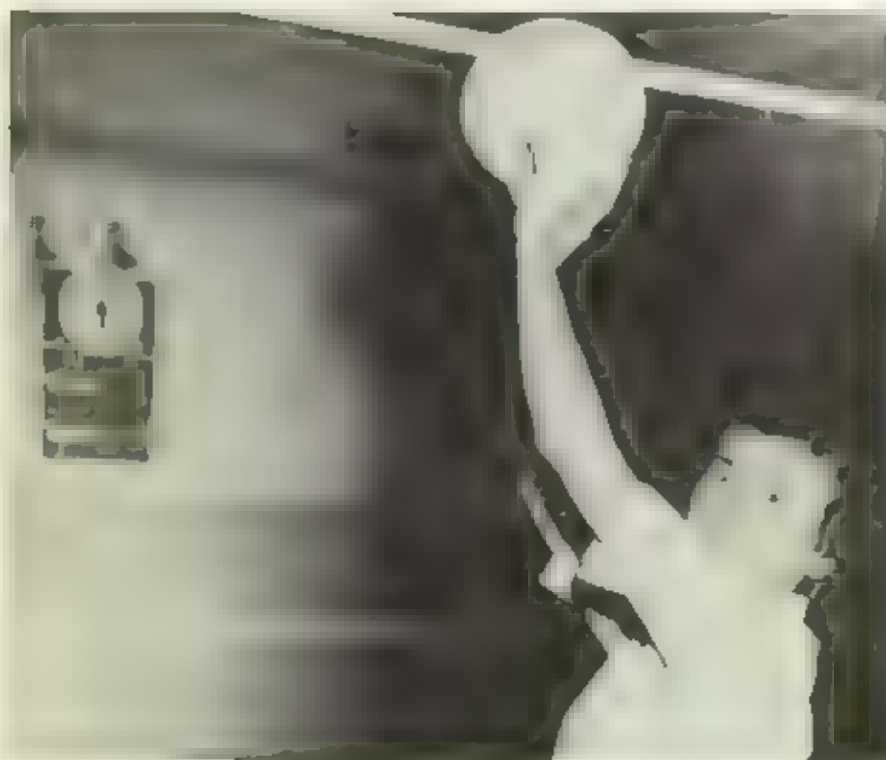

Spanish amigas are most familiar with Mrs. Tillie Rivera, as are the freshmen of homeroom 307. Mrs. Rivera moderates the Spanish Club, besides instructing five classes in this language. The history, literature, and customs of the Spanish people enhance her students' mastery of the language itself. This past year she has helped inaugurate a new type of Spanish course which concentrates on conversation. Through memorization of basic dialogue sentences, students are exposed to grammar painlessly. Comprehension and speaking of Spanish are learned quickly by this method.

The "pep" of the Pep Club, Sister Philip, who moderates that organization, is reknowned for her vivacious personality. Teaching the subjects of Algebra and Geometry, Sister uses a cheery approach which makes studying math a joy. Sister Philip also instructs three freshmen homerooms in religion, including her own homestead, 306. Through these classes, the frosh are taken beyond Catechism study to deeper religious thought, which includes the rudiments of theology and apologetics.

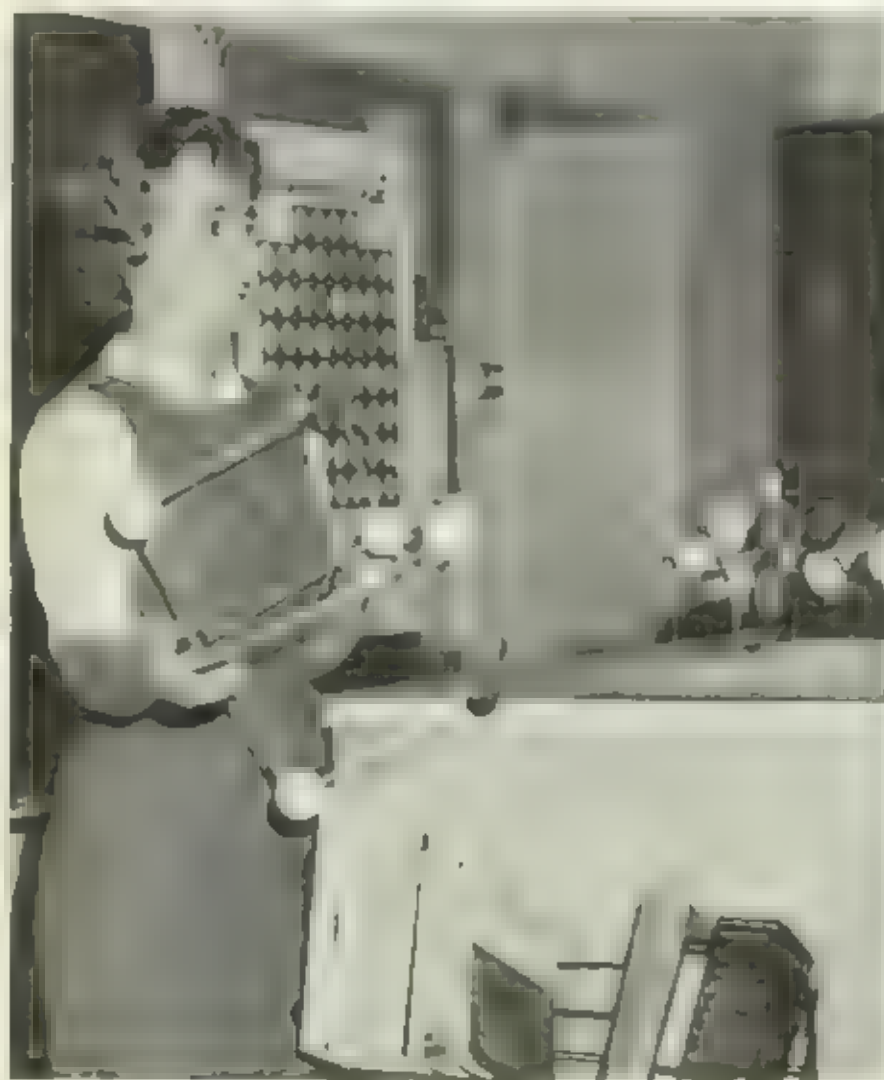

Sister Philip stands by as Mary Lou Miles attempts to solve the "mysteries of the triangle"

Accuracy is vital in many areas

Techniques used in the sport of volleyball are shown by Miss Pack

Mrs. Deane describes the construction of a crystal molecule in her chemistry class

The fields of math, science, and sports hold in common the necessity for accuracy. Without this attribute, studies in any one of these areas is useless.

Mrs. Helene Kester, through her Geometry and Algebra I and II classes, emphasizes this need for preciseness. Her college-gearred courses encourage responsibility and self-improvement. Mrs. Kester finds that only through logical reasoning can the correct conclusion on any subject be drawn.

The science department at PHS is under the leadership of Mrs. Delight Deane, who moderates the Science Club, besides teaching. Members of this organization endeavor to advance their knowledge of scientific principles. Her chemistry and physics pupils learn the theory during lecture sessions which they then apply to laboratory problems, thus mastering both basic and advanced techniques. The importance of precise calculations is again demonstrated in the trigonometry course presented by Mrs. Deane.

Still another field in which accuracy plays a vital role is sports. Miss Irma Pack, Pioneer coach, feels that this is achieved only through constant practice and team work. Miss Pack directs the freshmen and sophomore physical education classes and teaches basic first aid procedures.

Full of determination and energy, Mrs. Kester begins her day of math classes.

Patty Putty explores the wonders of the recorder under the guidance of Sister Priscilla Ann

Miss Gabrielle proudly displays some of her 3rd year art students' stained glass windows

Mrs. Schilz prepares material for her history class

The importance of a well-rounded education cannot be over-emphasized. For this reason, Providence offers several courses in the fine arts

In the field of music, Sister Priscilla Ann capably molds raw talents. Besides her daily choral classes, Sister directs the Lyric Ensemble and the Providence Chorus. Sister originated a recorder class, which she conducts for enthusiastic young musicians. Also under her direction are PHS's piano students

Encouraging self expression and creativity is Miss Gabrielle. Providence's art instructor for several years. She develops in her students an appreciation and understanding of art masterpieces and a knowledge of the history and advancement of art. Also, Miss Gabrielle ably organizes the annual art show, The Pageant of Masters

Mrs. Angela Schilz visits Providence on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays to teach the juniors of 307 American History. As a member of the American Studies team teaching projects Mrs. Schilz has helped to give the entire Junior class a better understanding of the American way of life.

when we are gone

The last four years have molded fine Christian young women who will go forth into the world as representatives of Providence ideas and ideals. Each year has transformed by degrees this molding process until, in the senior year—the polishing year, the finished product emerges.

Many memories will linger from the senior year: victory in the candy bar drive, the privilege of being relieved from setting up chairs, college entrance examination scores, a jubilant day in the snow, the Prom, and finally, an adieu to the alma mater. Joys and sorrows blend in a bittersweet remembrance.

Seniors will always ponder their high school memories with a feeling of gratitude, for the final year reveals as its end product what one is in heart and soul. In the future, seniors will realize how great a gift this has been.

Rules and good example

Student Body officers, each holding symbols of office, are: Cheri Cocagne, president; Ronet Brumbaugh, vice-president; Loretta Kawalec, secretary; Betty Cratchiols, treasurer; and Billie Russell, sergeant-at-large.

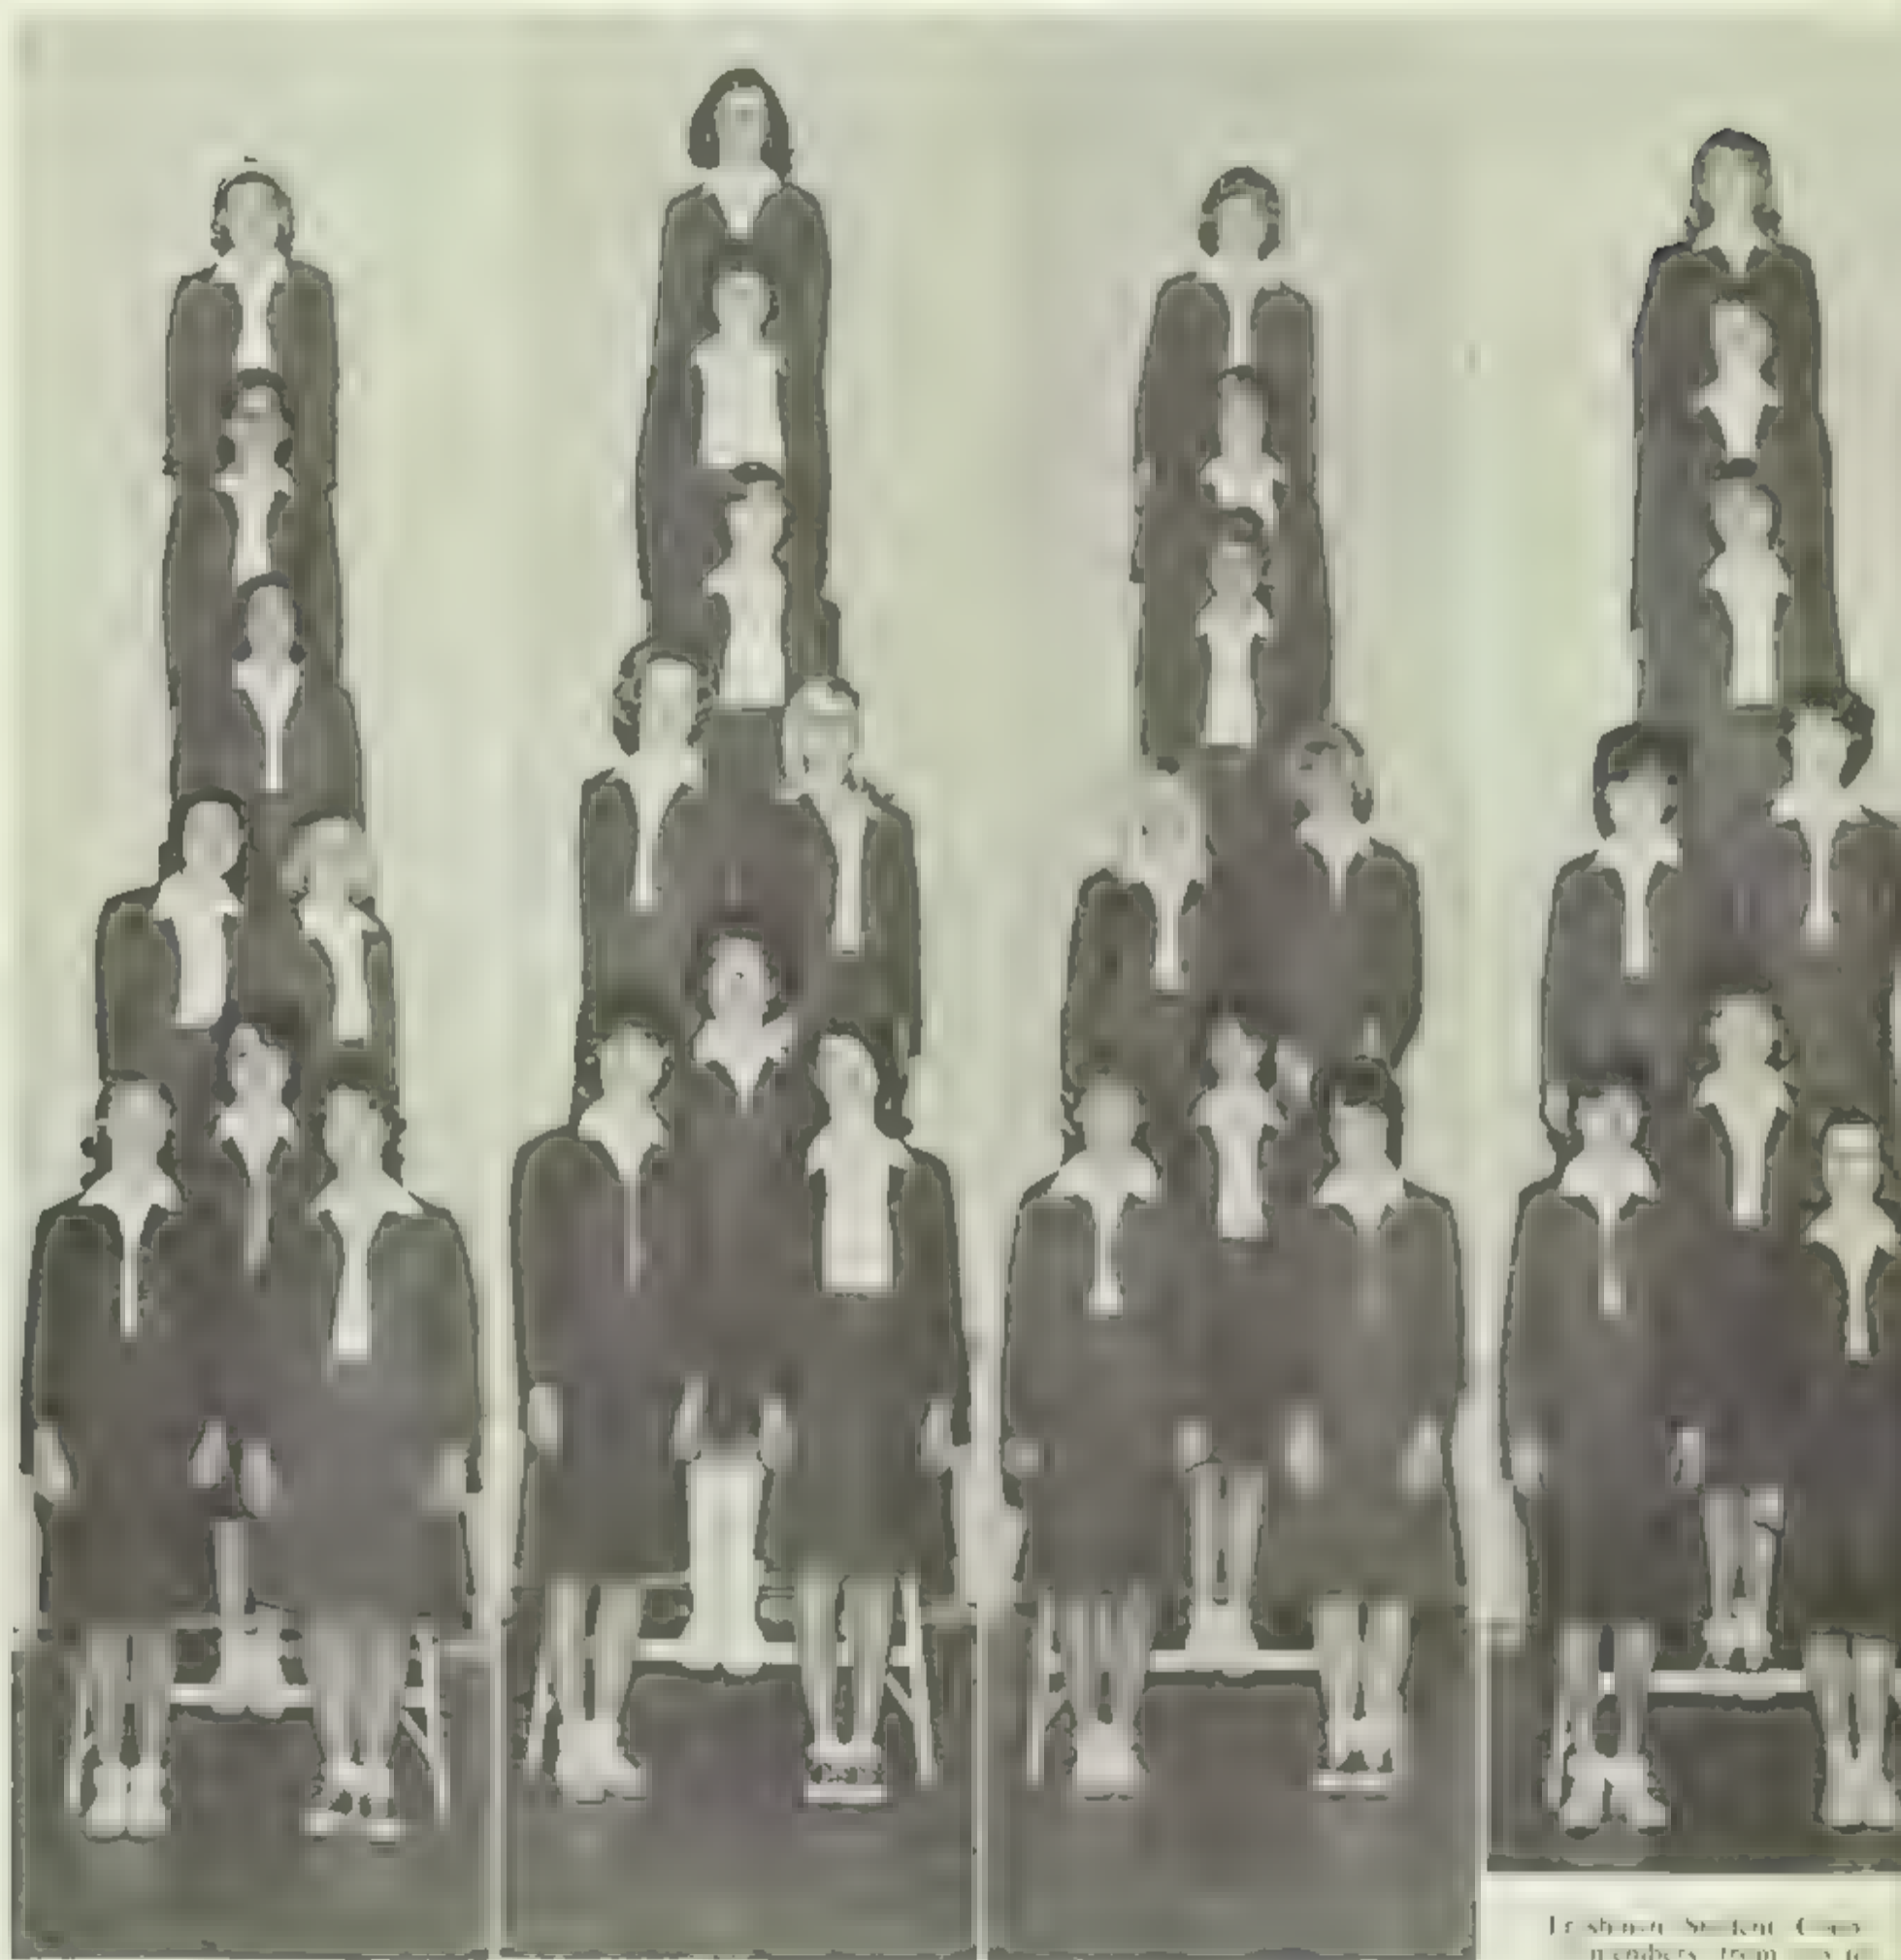

The guidance and leadership of the Providence student body falls to a select group, the Student Council. Its members include the ASB officers, homeroom presidents and council representatives, the presidents of COOL, NFL, and CSF, and the editors of the Esprit and Vista. Student body president, Cheri Cocagne, presides over the meetings, with Sister Agnes as advisor.

The Student Council not only enforces and interprets school laws, but also is responsible for many drives and campaigns for the betterment of Providence life. The members strive to instill a deeper understanding of the Christian principles underlying all rules, and to direct others to a true application through example and guidance.

Student Body president, Cheri Cocagne, confers with Sister Agnes on matters of student government.

PHSers, endeavoring to advance in personal holiness, as well as to Christianize their fellow man, seek membership in COOL, the Confraternity of Our Lady of Sorrows. This, the largest and only spiritual organization at Providence, is moderated by Sister Rebecca. President Kathy Trinity and members of the COOL council meet weekly to plan discussions and apostolic works for the members to perform.

COOL restricts its membership to sophomores, juniors, and seniors, while freshmen desirous of membership enter a probation period as COOLettes. During this time, the girls, guided by Sister Clare, are introduced to the rules of the Confraternity and its practices. They are then able to decide if they are willing to accept the responsibilities of active COOL membership.

COOLette officers are: V. Cartwright, C. Lamang, S. Moriarty, P. Kelly, B. Dahmus.

COOLettes gather to discuss their hospital trip.

CSFers share their talents

Providence's chapter of the California Scholarship Federation is under the able direction of Sister Martha. Members of this honor society receive temporary status by attaining a minimum of ten semester grade points, which means at least three A's in solid subjects. Permanent membership can be earned with four semesters of such scholastic achievement. CSF members tutor the less gifted PHSerS in accordance with their motto, "Scholarship for Service". Linda Trinkaus, this year's president, works with Sister Martha in organizing this needed activity. The CSF is largely responsible for the high academic standard PHSerS has always maintained.

Officers of CSF are: P. Moriarty, M. Rileas, G. Wooldridge, L. Trinkaus.

Each CSF member contributes to a discussion on a selected work of literature

Members of the Esprit 1964 staff benefit from their hours of effort, which occupy a large amount of after-school time, by developing a sense of organization and design. Besides the journalistic experience, section heads learn the importance of working with others to meet the four production deadlines. On matters of major importance, such as original ideas for the theme and cover, the entire staff is consulted. Final plans, however, are left to Linda Hendrix, editor-in-chief. Mrs. Judith Ramos, advisor for this organization, approves all copy and works with the editors in organizing material.

This year PHS's literary magazine is again under the editorship of Irene Basey. Irene and other members of her staff were chosen because of superior English ability in the field of creative writing. The Concept serves to publish winning entries in the Vista's annual writing competition. Compositions and poems from the school's English and foreign language classes are also published. Acting as advisor, Miss Linda Gill is responsible for the meeting of publication deadlines as well as for approving all material to be printed.

The Quill and Scroll is an international honor society for high school journalists of superior ability. The major requirements for membership are scholastic achievement and exceptional work in the field of journalism. Members of the PHS chapter of this organization sport gold pins and receive the Quill and Scroll magazine, which offers valuable suggestions for improvement of school publications. After approval by Sister Martha, moderator, prospective members are enstated in a formal ceremony held in March.

PHS's chapter of the Quill and Scroll has four members: L. Hendrix, M. O'Donnell, P. Moriarty, J. Mackey.

useful experience

A newspaper is a vital organ of communication. Providence's Vista, a monthly publication, informs PSHers of all significant school occurrences. While the feature pages serve to entertain and amuse, the editorials provoke thought and argument about problems pertinent to all.

Vista staff members, under editor Mary O'Donnell, prepare for their work with a course in journalism. Sister Martha, advisor, approves all articles and pictures and is chief copy reader.

Heads of production on Vista are, back row: J. Hunt, G. Garrison; assistant editor, B. Sheehan; editor, M. O'Donnell, S. O'Brien, V. Foster. Front: B. Russell, I. Russo, K. Snider.

Speech, drama students

PHS debaters and original events speakers include: K. Hurley, K. Burke, M. Matheson, A. Donnelly, Junell Mackey, Janice Mackey, B. Burke, Sister Stephanie, advisor

Clear and articulate speech is an important quality in a young woman. Sister Stephanie and Mrs. Jeri Snyder endeavor to impart this skill to the members of PHS's Speech Club. After continued practice in the mechanics of good speech, the girls concentrate their efforts on public speaking.

In inter-scholastic competition, Providence girls have captured numerous medals and trophies. Speakers who receive a minimum of 25 points in these school contests are given the privilege of National Forensic League membership. The NFL promotes the students' interest in debate and oratory fields.

Under the guidance of its moderator, Mrs. Jeri Snyder, the Drama Club affords its members the opportunity to express and develop their emotive talents. To achieve its objective of deepening interest in the theater arts, the Drama Club teaches its members skills in stage work, make-up, costuming, and direction, as well as in acting. The success of this teaching becomes apparent to the student body through the club's Christmas play and miscellaneous presentations throughout the year.

French Club officers include: M. LaSuer, P Campbell, C. McLaughlin, J. Russo, P Degen, D Balfoni.

Under the careful guidance of Mrs. Gabrielle Leclerc, the French Club enriches its members with the culture of France. A new club at Providence, it already enjoys a large membership, open to all French students of at least one semester. President Nancy Bryden organizes activities to help the members fulfill their aim of becoming masters of the French language and culture.

The excitement of Olvera Street at Christmas was enjoyed by Spanish Club members.

Under the guidance of Mrs. Tillie Rivera, Spanish Club members, who must be second year students in the language, become acquainted with the culture of Spain. Throughout the year, the organization sponsors several activities centered about Spanish customs and traditions. Excursions to Olvera Street and to the Padua Hills theatre are anticipated annual events.

One of Providence's new clubs, the German Club, is moderated by Mrs. Susan Basmajian. She and club president, Mary Schenk, work closely together to make the club a vital organization. German feasts, holidays, and customs are actively observed by club members. Perhaps the most enjoyable activity is the trip to a German opera. This year's presentation was Cosi Fan Tutte.

The purpose of the Key Club is to help each student determine and understand her role in life. The three states of life—religious, married, and single—are thoroughly discussed at regular meetings, which are supplemented by frequent outside activity. Membership is open to seniors, who profit most from the club discussions, since they will soon have to choose a life role. The president of the Key Club, Jo Napolitano, works in conjunction with Sister Rebecca, advisor, to plan an organized and comprehensive program.

Literature, science invite exploration

The responsibility of caring for Providence's Newman Library falls to Mrs. Emily Guhin and the members of the Library Club. Besides advancing in knowledge of literature, the members of this organization gain valuable experience in the workings and arrangements of libraries. The Library Club sponsors raffles and—new this year—an intra-club volleyball tournament. Proceeds from these activities and those from book fines are used to purchase new books for the use of PHSers. Members aid in checking out books and in maintaining library records.

Efficient Library Club officers include library housekeeping among their chores. Officers are: B. Burke, M. Jiron, Y. Quevedo, M. Page, W. Quintanar

Education in our age of progress places great stress upon study of the sciences. Through Mrs. Delight Deane's efforts, the science department at Providence has greatly broadened its scope. Under her direction, the Science Club is encouraged to explore advanced realms; therefore, only physics and chemistry students are eligible for membership. The members' activities comprise research and varied experiments. Members also participate in the local science fair. Thus are the scientists of tomorrow provided with a solid basis for future studies and a realization of the potential of this complex field.

The Providence Choral is reknowned for its excellence largely because of the existing leadership of Sister Priscilla Anne. Choral members practice daily to achieve the perfection demanded of them and to enlarge their repertoire of songs. Their rigorous training qualifies them to enter the annual Valley Regional Festival and the immaculate Heart Song Festival. They also are able to entertain at the Shrine Auditorium.

This talented vocal group often enhances PHS activities, such as the art and fashion shows. The Lyric Ensemble, composed of outstanding Choral members, frequently joins the Choral in its presentation, as well as giving those of its own.

Realizing the importance of practical training in preparation for future homemaking, PHS includes as an extra-curricular organization, the Home Economics Club. Miss Jean Pfenning supervises all the club's activities in her role as club advisor. The members of this organization acquire training in the culinary arts and benefit from the experiences of guest speakers. President, K. Among other responsibilities, Sister Philip, moderator, arranges bus transportation for off-campus games. All classes are represented in this club which provides girls opportunity to release pent up energy. Pep Clubbers boast that they have the school's "most fun club".

Once every month, the parents of Providence students are given the opportunity to meet with their daughters' teachers. At this regular meeting, parents and faculty can discuss problems, work out ways to help individual girls, or simply get to know each other. Besides this, some form of entertainment is offered either by the student body or by the faculty. These meetings always prove valuable and interesting.

Underclassmen and upperclassmen alike get back into the swing of school life by a week of wearing name tags, beginning new friendships, and renewing old ones. The week was started off with a special assembly for the freshmen and seniors, during which each new PHSer was presented with a bow, a lollipop, and a "Big Sister" to guide her through her new home at Providence.

The high point of the week and gaiest of all friend-making activities was Campus Night. Each homeroom presented a skit to the student body to depict its class spirit and ingenuity.

At a special assembly the freshmen class was officially welcomed to Providence. The Big Sisters presented each freshman with her uniform jacket, the symbol of her acceptance into the Providence family. The Little Sisters were wished happiness and success in their studies; while the freshmen, in turn, promised loyalty and a contribution of their talents to their school.

A tea was also arranged for the incoming freshmen and their mothers by the members of the sophomore class. The new students made many acquaintances as did their mothers at this tea.

Masses increase spirituality

Providence recognizes that the spiritual aspect of its students' personalities must be developed with the physical, intellectual, and emotional.

The Feast of Christ the King is of special significance to us. As young Catholics of America, we must look to Christ for leadership. Besides participating in a Mass for the student body that feast day, COOL members joined in a march to proclaim publicly that Christ is our King.

A Mass of exceptional interest to all was the "Mass of the future," celebrated according to changes expected by the Ecumenical Council. The personal participation in this Mass was shown in the congregational recitation of prayers and the individual offering of bread world

Providence students walked to their fourth period classes, chatting gaily, at 10:52 AM on November 22, 1963. Suddenly, a hush penetrated the chatter as they became aware of the words being broadcast over the loud speaker. "The President has been shot and is in serious condition." At 11:34 the final news came: John Fitzgerald Kennedy was dead. The shock and sorrow hit immediately. Academic activities of the day were replaced with prayer for the deceased leader.

The reaction of PHS, of course, merely reflected the reaction of the entire world to this unfathomable loss. Hopefully, the three days that followed and their meaning will never be forgotten by Providence or the world.

Christmas tree and gift wrapped gifts in faculty room reflect the happy spirit of the teachers.

Christmas at Providence is honored by certain traditions. In preparation for the feast, the season of Advent embodies many spiritual activities. Besides the school wreath on the esplanade, there are advent wreaths, with 4 candles, in each homeroom. Every day the candles, signifying the weeks of Advent, are lit.

Charity is shown by the Providence baskets containing gifts, clothes, and food which are assembled by each homeroom. After being blessed, the baskets are taken to needy families.

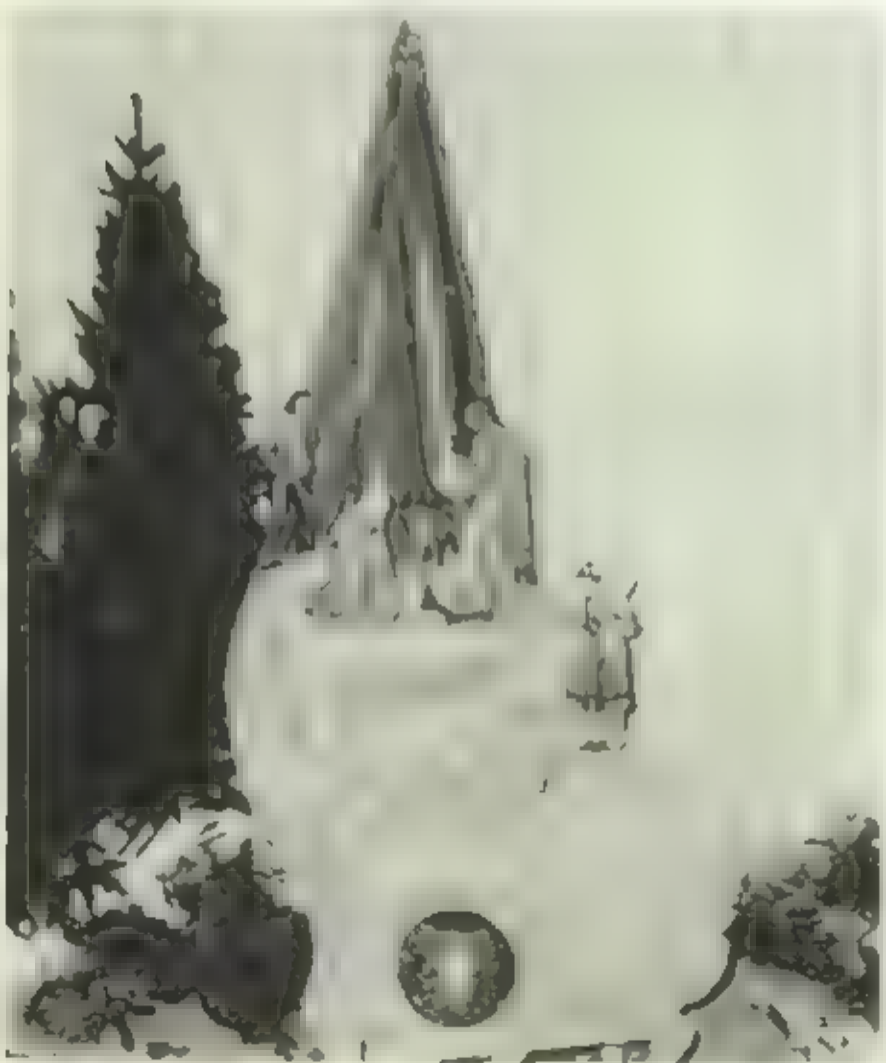

Another activity which contributes to the Providence spirit is "Krist Kindl". Every day a girl receives an offering of prayer or a small gift from her "Krist Kindl," a benefactress unknown until the end of Advent.

The entire period of preparation is climaxed by the final Christmas assembly, a beautiful program of appropriate songs presented by the PHS choral groups, under the direction of Sister Priscilla Ann. In addition to this a Christmas play is presented by Mrs. Snyder's drama group.

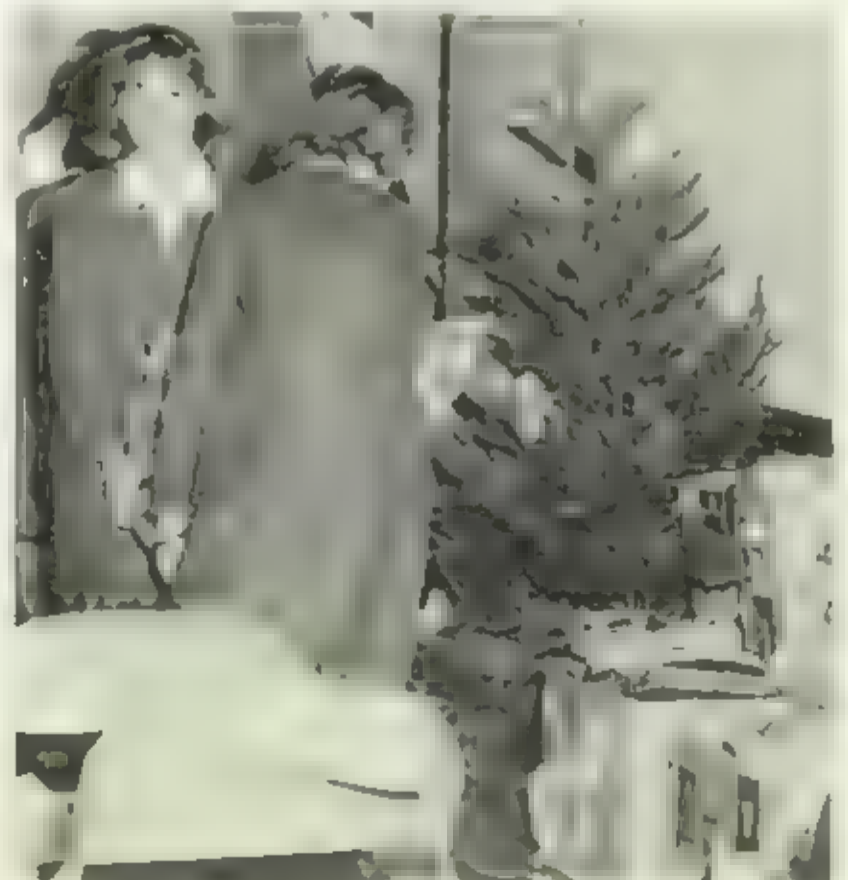

When Christmas finally arrives, Providence girls are imbued with an understanding of the true meaning of Christmas. They have prepared their minds and hearts for Christ's arrival.

Rings signify accomplishment

Memories of high school days often fade; but one remembrance, lasting as long as the gold of which it is made, is the class ring. A symbol of educational advancement, this band is a constant reminder to the wearer of the pride in school and in development which is characteristic of the student. Late in February, the class of 1965 were awarded their personally initialed rings. Although there was no formal ceremony, the significance of the rings was explained to the girls.

The choice of one's vocation demands careful thought and deliberation, since the attainment of salvation depends upon this decision. The annual Vocation Week affords an opportunity for PHSers to become aware of the different fields open to them. Representatives of the three states of life—married, religious, and single—are invited to explain aspects of those callings to the student body. Such careers as journalism, nursing, teaching, and business are also outlined by persons competent in these fields.

Variety in curriculum is offered to PHSers by several assemblies which entertain as well as inform. One of the more interesting presentations was Larry Collins' musical act. Proficient in a number of instruments, Mr. Collins played them—with the help of audience "volunteers".

"Charm for Young Ladies" was the subject of a speech by a teacher from Patricia Stevens' Finishing School. She illustrated her talk with active demonstrations of correct standing and sitting postures.

Representatives from local Catholic colleges spoke to seniors and their parents during an evening assembly. College information, both general and specific, was discussed.

Seniors devote days

Mrs. Thompson admires daughter Helene's senior pin after the ceremony, as Paula Degen looks on

As graduation draws closer, seniors contemplate their futures at a special, one day retreat

Traditionally, each class shows its respect for the departing seniors with a special activity. The junior class presents the prom, while the sophs prepare a brunch to be held following the Baccalaureate Mass. Freshman "little sisters" treat their "big sisters" to a box lunch picnic at Griffith Park.

The seniors themselves secretly skip school to frolic in the snow at Camp Mariastella on senior ditch day.

Four years of school completed, the seniors are rewarded for outstanding efforts. The more deserving seniors merit scholarships; others sport hard-earned letters on their sweaters. All members of the class proudly wear their senior pins.

Those seniors honored as semi-finalists for a California state scholarship were, back row: S. O'Brien, I. Tricketts, I. Bases, K. Brimbaugh, C. Wolter, M. Bush. Front: R. Keaster, G. Wooldridge, L. Hendrix, M. Hammond, M. O'Donnell.

to both work and play

Seniors who have letters are, back row: P. Moriarty, M. Crews, C. Couagne, R. Brumbaugh, A. Green. 2nd row: K. Martino, L. Trinkaus, J. Caldarell, N. Hope. 3rd row: J. Hunt, J. Napolitano, P. Walsh, K. McLaughlin, V. Foster. 4th row: I. Basey, Lyn Schwalm, L. Powers, M. O'Donnell, L. Hendrix. 5th row: M. Silva, J. Fischer, G. Ortiz, Lee Schwalm, P. Campbell, E. Anastasia. 6th row: M. Diedrich, J. Mackey, B. Burke, R. Morone, I. Kowalec, D. Charland. Bottom row: P. Schafer, J. Todd, C. Feloney.

After a brisk afternoon in the snow, seniors take an opportunity to warm themselves by the fire before the trip home.

A most integral and welcomed part of any snow trip is the hot lunch, which the seniors are here relishing after an afternoon of strenuous activity.

Andee Green and Sister Rebecca lead a hiking party through the beautiful woods near Camp Mariastella.

The day was fun, but weary seniors are anxious to get home.

Junior Anita Donnelly was chosen by the faculty to represent Providence at Girls' State.

Ronce Brumbaugh, at right, gives a lively description of her experiences at Girls' State last year to alternate, Mindy Mathison and delegate, Anita Donnelly.

Diligence in studies was a main consideration in the selection of Anita as delegate.

Achieving recognition in the National Merit Scholarship program were, back row: K. Knutta, finalist; recipients of Letters of Commendation: J. Mackey, R. Keaster, K. Haverick. Front: L. Bascy, S. O'Brien, L. Hendrix.

Each year the faculty chooses one girl from the junior class to represent Providence at Girls' State, a model state government convention, held at the Davis campus of the University of California. This year, Anita Donnelly merited the honor because of her leadership and scholastic ability and her interest in government. Anita will attend Girls' State this summer and will share her experience in practical politics with PHSers next fall.

Every year the junior class of PHS has taken the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test. In 1963, for the first time, one of the girls tested, Karla Knutta, received the honor of becoming a finalist. In addition to this, six girls received Letters of Commendation, which is also a first for Providence. A recognition such as this is an outstanding tribute to the girls and to the school they represent.

Devotion to study earns dividends

Beauty brings fame to PHS girls

Applause rings out after Betsy is crowned by senior class president of Notre Dame Honor was brought to Providence this year by students who were recognized at Notre Dame High School for their beauty and popularity. Selected as PHS's candidate for ND Carnival Queen, Betsy Cracchiola competed against four girls from other schools. Receiving the most votes, a jubilant Betsy was crowned Queen of the Carnival.

For the Notre Dame Homecoming activities, senior boys each nominated candidates for queen. From this group five were chosen as finalists. Three of these princesses are PHSers Cathie Klarin, Missy McQuattie, and Lyn Schwalm.

Cheerleaders, Drill Team add bounce

This year the Providence Drill Team has initiated a new practice: telling a story with each skit they perform. Besides the skits they have a repertoire of several traditional formations which they present at volleyball and basketball games. These include the "P H S", the "V for Victory," and the "Ten-gallon Hat." The purpose of the Drill Team is to promote spirit at Pioneer games. In 1963-64, under the direction of Sister Phillip, moderator, the Drill Team has successfully fulfilled this goal.

The class of 1965, as juniors, have accumulated memories over the past three years; now they eagerly anticipate their final and most exciting year. With this anticipation comes also a realization of responsibility and authority, for upper classmen set the pace in the school. Underclassmen must instinctively look to them for leadership.

During the first years, the PHSer receives a general knowledge of necessary subjects. It is in the junior year, however, that she begins to develop more specific talents and attitudes. The third year student is afforded more freedom in selecting classes, depending upon her interests.

But the junior year is more than a period of academic development. With the new seniority achieved, the junior acquires certain privileges. No longer is the Prom a dream, but a reality.

Juniors ready themselves for the role they are expected to assume. But, amazingly, it isn't the event that is mainly remembered, but the preparation.

Although eager to step onward and become part of the "upper crust", members of the sophomore class will long remember their second year at Providence.

What had been considered routine classes will become fond memories, as will the exciting events of sophomore life. The perspective developed in physical science and Modern Affairs classes will serve as basis for future scientific and civic efforts. The once-dreaded geometry classes will pave the way toward clear thinking based on logical deductions. Physical education, a vital period in a soph's day, will equip her with an awareness of the importance of maintaining physical fitness.

The sophomore also acquires necessary leadership qualities during her second year at PHS. Her spirit and loyalty to both her school and her class will grow, as will her appreciation of her teachers' efforts.

Undoubtedly, the social activities of this year will be fondly recalled, as the sophomores realize that development on all levels is the goal for a true Christian woman.

Vivacious Freshmen dis-

Their first year of high school is over; the freshmen have been seasoned for the coming three years. They now realize that high school is somewhat different from what they had anticipated. Also, they have come to realize what is expected of them in these formative years. They have taken another step on the road to adulthood.

This year has been filled with many trying moments—getting accustomed to the schedule of classes, having only two minutes to get dressed for gym, experiencing the excitement or the disappointment of the first mixer.

All of these events will remain in a freshman's mind because they are part of a very precious period in her life. "Big Sister's" bow will be a long-cherished memory.

Indeed, this is only the first step. The next three years will each bring its memorable incidents; but the freshman year is special. For this is the beginning.

ESPRIT YEARLY

MAY 16, 1964

VOL. VI

Editor Acknowledges Those Who Made Annual Possible

Linda Hendrix

BLRBANK, May 16 (AP) — Editor of Esprit 1964, Linda Hendrix, today released a statement recognizing the assistance she received in producing Providence's yearbook. Following is the text of her remarks.

Counting a year as memorable as 1963-64 was not simple. We would have liked so much to recapture every moment of it, impossible though this would be. We of the Esprit staff have tried to record the most precious memories of the past year in this scrapbook. Such an effort required great cooperation.

First, I want to thank wholeheartedly Providence High for giving me the opportunity to edit our Esprit. Already I realize that the responsibility and organization I learned from this task are invaluable. My job, however, was hardly a solo one. It would have been impossible without the aid of many thoughtful people. To them I wish to extend my most sincere appreciation, particularly so to:

Sister Agnes, who patiently let staff members interrupt her at any time of day; who is always ready with advice and permission for frequently bothersome requests.

Mrs. Judith Ramos, advisor, who, with helpful suggestions and copyreading, easily adjusted to the chaos normal to a yearbook staff.

Mr. Grant Lippert of Grant Studios, who took special pictures for us. His skill in all phases of photography produced perfect pictures from our sketchy ideas.

Mr. Robert Hopkins, consultant from the American Yearbook Company, who could be contacted at any hour to solve our technical problems.

Parents of PHSers, who extended their financial patronage. Special thanks to parents of staff members, mine included, who adjusted to their daughters' usually inconvenient schedules.

Faculty, who showed consideration and forbearance, particularly on picture-taking days.

Students, whose support of the Annual Ball made it the most successful ever, also, to those who performed in and attended the Esprit Talent Show.

Each section of the yearbook represents the hard work and cleverness of a dependable staff member. Everyone of these girls deserves praise and thanks.

Judi Hunt, Susan Wright, Gail Woodrudge and Kathy McLaughlin, school photographers, who could smile even after being given near-impossible assignments. Their after hours' labor in the darkroom was positively heroic.

Mary Mathison, assistant editor and all-around "girl Friday", who could do anything from writing copy to running errands on a moment's notice. Her ingenuity, especially in the dark hours before a deadline, was extraordinary.

Karla Knutts, who helped on all sections, besides working with Loretta Criscone on Underclassmen. Both girls are probably still balancing some 400 tiny picture boxes in their minds.

Helene Thompson, who could be counted on for painstakingly perfect artwork. The distinction and good taste of her designs are evident.

Jan Caddrell and her staff, whose efficient typing was unfailingly prompt. Jan often worked late into the night to finish necessary typing.

Paddy Moriarty and Mary Gorasi, who consistently wrote original copy and running heads.

Loretta Kautalec and Barbara Schenk, who organized and arranged for pictures in the Faculty section.

Linda Trinkant, Jeanette Fischer, and Betty Stafford, who performed the difficult task of covering a busy year in their Activities section.

Maria Cretes and Vonnice Febr, who accomplished the incredible—inventing new ways to pose Organizations.

Rosemary Keaster and Janel Mackey, who skillfully injected zest into their Sports section.

Barbara Peres and Chris Meyer, who handled the annual's business matters with accuracy and perseverance.

Thus, a yearbook is created, another year recorded. We will often recall the sadness, the joy, the friendships, and the fun shared at Providence. No matter where our futures may take us or what we may do, we can always look back on this past year and remember these things—for that is the purpose of Esprit 1964. We can only hope we have fulfilled this purpose."

Larry

Dear Karen Rinaldi,

I know in 3 more weeks when school is finally over that Romano will see the light! He better. Vicky doesn't know it yet, but when we stay at his house and have the boys over, I get Larry for me, Romano for you, and we won't say anything, but Raymond can stay with Vicky. Now don't misunderstand me. I like Raymond "very much" but seeing that Larry has already "claimed" me, I won't argue. Next Saturday when I come over & take a walk or am alone with Larry (out of the way) you could just happen to drop by.

On second thought, if you don't want to, I'll pretend I'm not paying attention and watch Romano myself. This way I can find out if Vix was just making the story up about Romano liking her so much & putting his arm around her, etc., etc. Until we meet again someday —

have both told me that Larry is fast but they haven't said anything else. All of you know him so much better & I haven't been able to get any information.

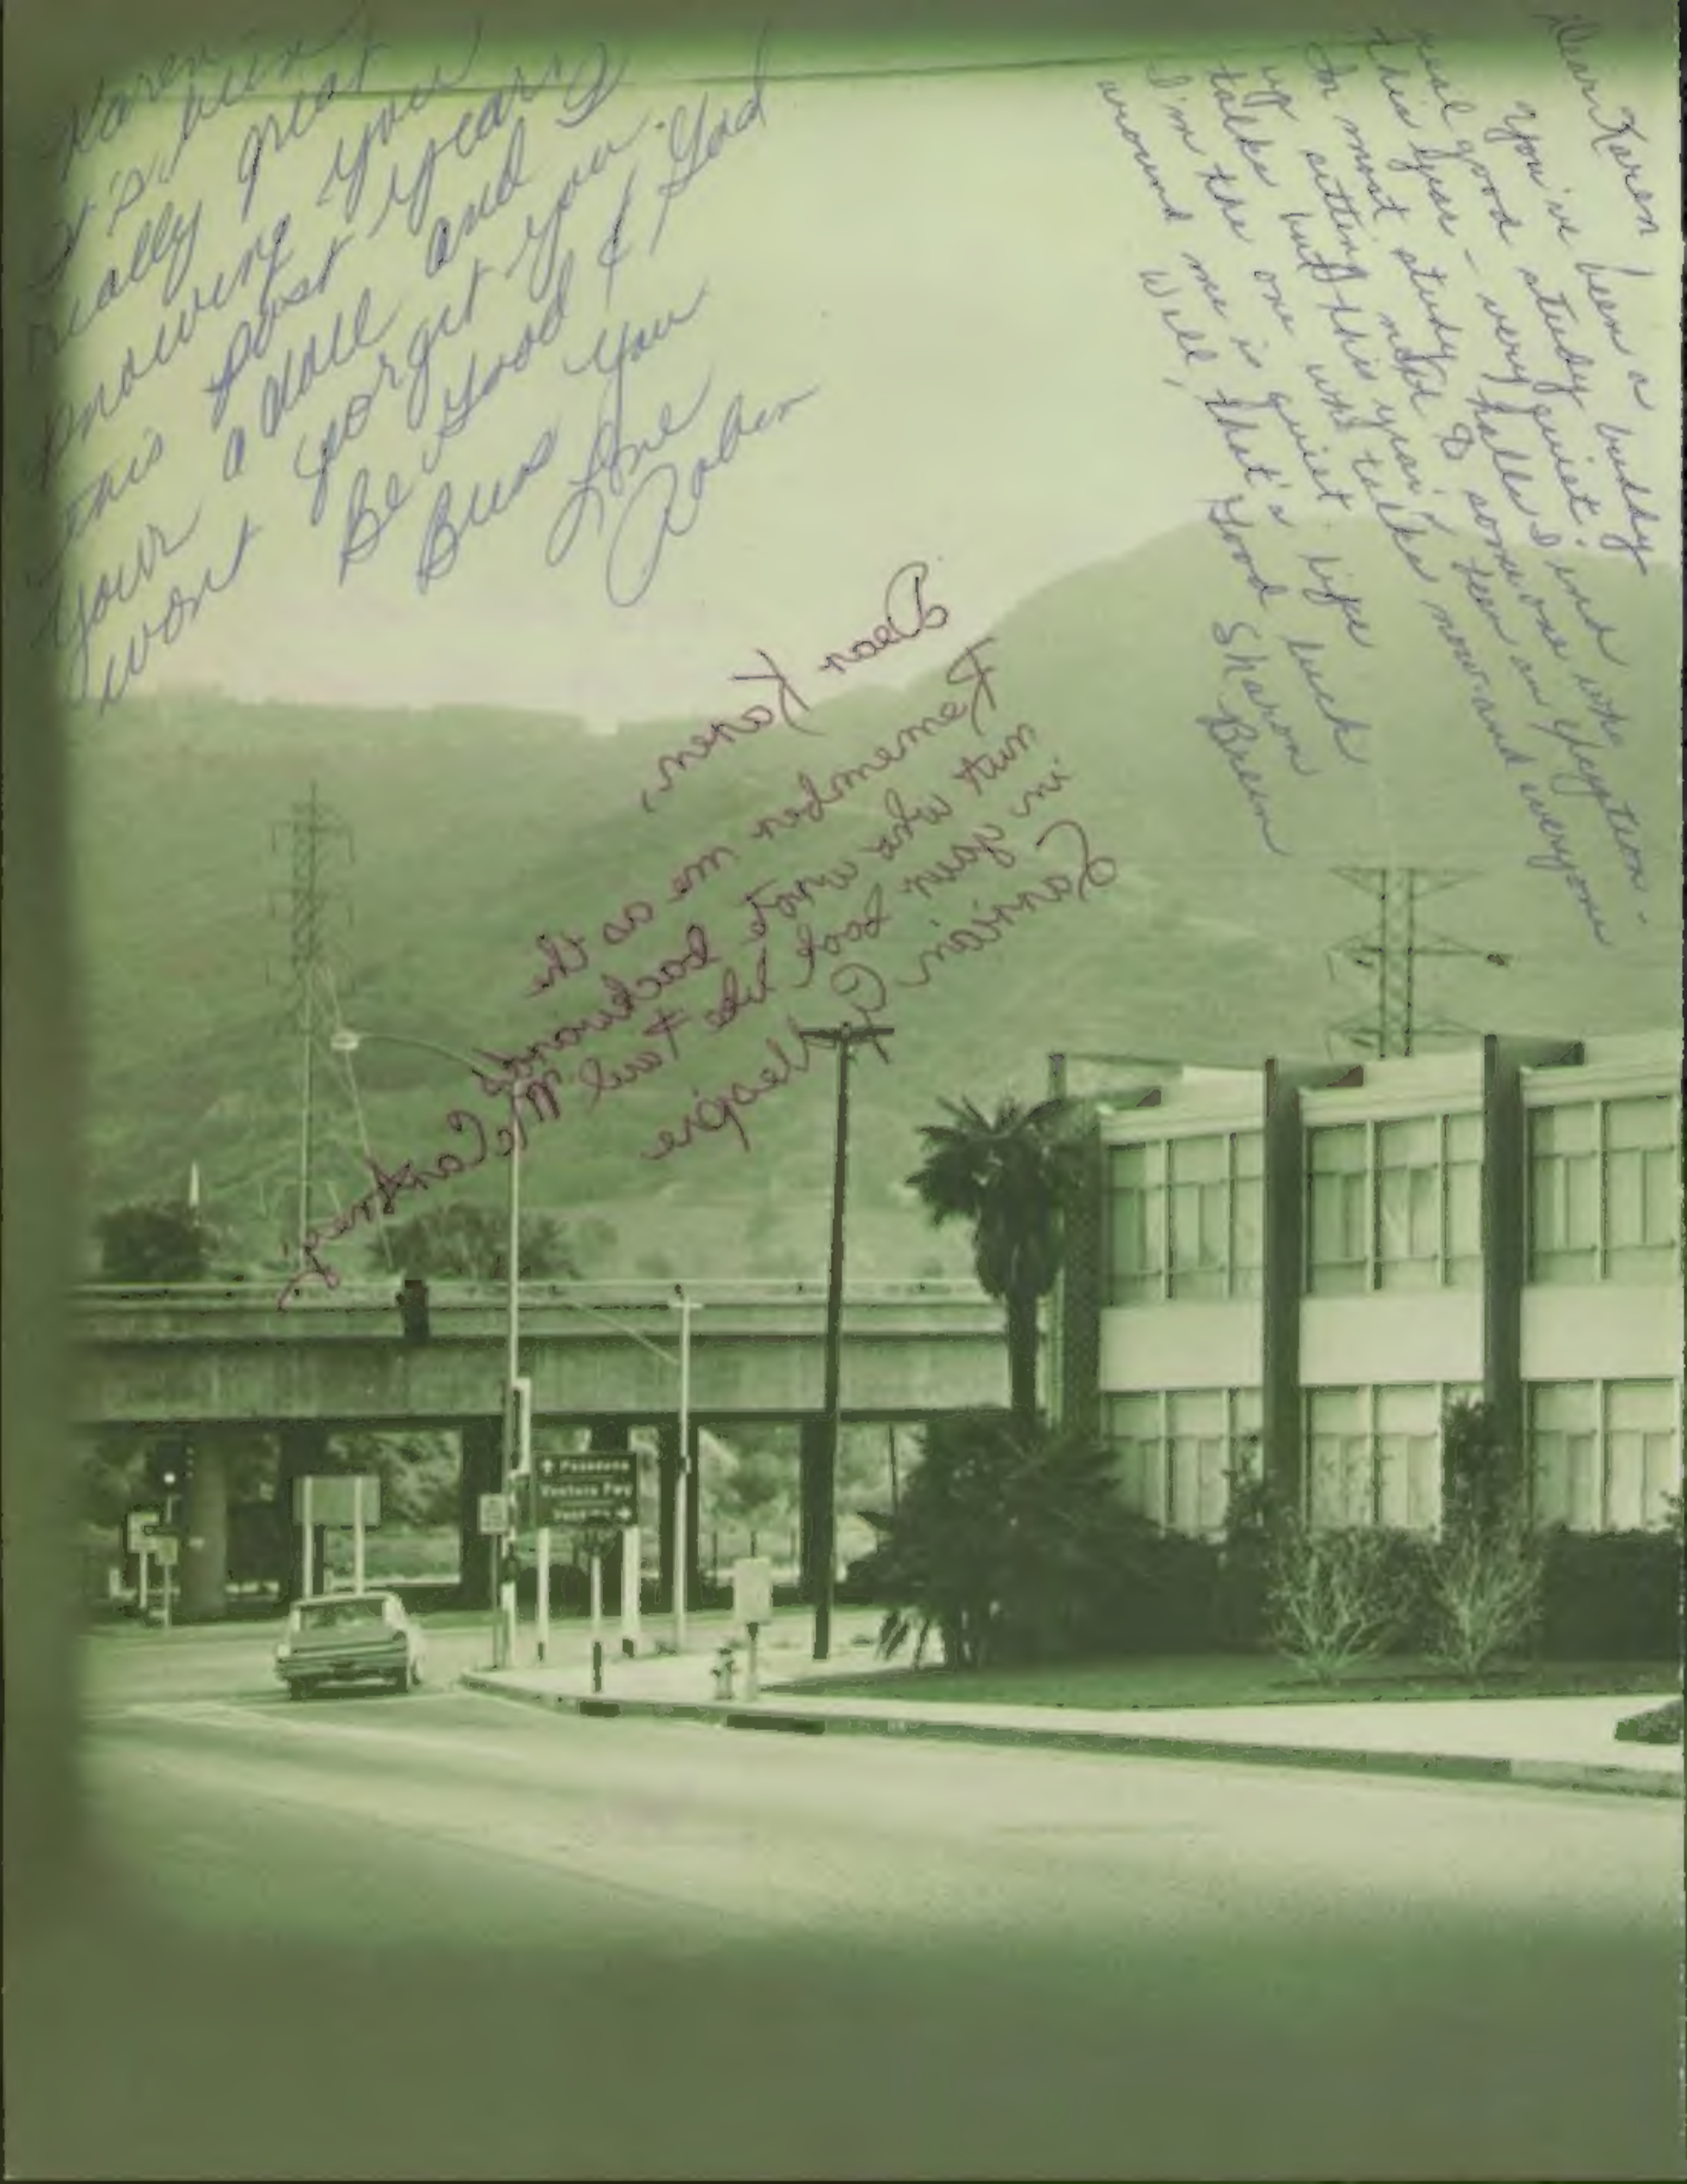

Love,

Lenny

Karen
 it's just really great knowing you and your family. I won't forget
 you. Be good and love your father.

Dear Karen
 I'm in luck
 you're studying hard. I hope you'll be successful. I love you and your family.
 I'm glad you are all well.
 Love,
 Dad

Dear Karen,
 I remember our first meeting in the mountains.
 I hope you're doing well.
 Love,
 Dad

Karen,
Good luck in your coming years
at Providence
I love you,
(Nothing serious)
Opal

Dear Karen,
It has really been nice knowing you this year. Good luck through the summer. See you next year! (I hope in more classes.)
Love,
Betty
